CITY PERSONALS.

Mr. John W. Norton is expected home at the end of the week.

Mr. F. Bufe is erecting a dwelling on Broadway near Grand avenue.

Mr. E. F. Bull, a prominent attorney of Ottawa, Ill., is in town on a visit for a few days.

Mr. John Maher will shortly begin building a $10,000 residence on Washington avenue between Grand and Vandeventer avenues.

Mr. John McGovern, Vice-President of the Laclede Gas Company, has his beautiful blonde moustache down to two very fine points.

Mrs. E. Garth will soon build two residences on the south side of Washington between Grand and Vandeventer avenues, to cost $7,000.

J. E. Kaime & Bro. are making extensive alterations on their building on the north side of Franklin avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets.

O. B. Sansum has returned from New Orleans, where he contracted a very severe cold. He did not witness the Mardi-Gras festivities at the Crescent City.

Colonel Flad, President of the Board of Public Improvement, and Mr. Pfeifer, Harbor and Wharf Commissioner, are two of the best mathematicians in the West.

Mr. Tom Keene, the actor whose frightful delineation of the dying drunkard in the play of "Drink" at Pope's is the talk of the town, spent several years of his life in studying delirium in the hospitals of the country. Mr. Keene played last year in Baltimore, and splendid opportunities were furnished him to pursue his favorite hobby. No city hospitals of the country contain so many cases of delirium tremens as those of Baltimore, and Mr. Keene seldom allowed a week to pass without pursuing his queer study, which has at last brought him almost as much notoriety as a lifetime of devotion to Shakspeare.

New Warrants.

New warrants have been issued against William Farrell, charged with petit larceny, and against James McNamara, who is accused of burglary in the second degree and larceny.

He Didn't Do It.

The case of the State against Louis Garfing, alias Louis Levy, charged with abandoning his wife, was called in the Court of Criminal Correction to-day, and a nolle pros. entered by the Prosecuting Attorney.

Two Months in Jail.

R. J. Wills was sentenced this morning to two months in jail for stealing a white vest, a lady's waist and three pairs of drawers from R. J. Mills. He pleaded not guilty, but the evidence was too strong for him.

Discharged.

Henry Meyers, John T. Brady and Michael Carroll were brought before Judge Cady charged with getting away with a lot of miscellaneous plunder belonging to Joe Clarke. Henry Meyers was held and the other defendants discharged.

No Assault.

David Kessler and Tony Brown were up in the Court of Criminal Correction this morning on a charge of assault and battery preferred by Carl Speck. Upon hearing the case Judge Cady dismissed the two defendants at the prosecutor's costs.

OPENING OF THE REICHSTAG.

The session of the Reichstag was opened today. The speech from the throne states that the relations of the government with all foreign powers are peaceful and friendly, and that confidence is felt in the maintenance of peace through the labors of the Berlin Congress, which has been upheld and the stipulations of the treaty of Berlin executed in nearly all their points.

The empire would seduleously and unselfishly, and conscious of its own power, continue to participate in endeavors to secure a lasting peace for Europe in consonance with the pacific disposition of its people, and with that object would endeavor to procure the cooperation and guarantee of powers similarly disposed.

The principal measures for legislation announced in the speech are: A bill for establishing biennial budgets; a new military law; prolongation of the law against Socialists, and for a commercial treaty with the South Sea Islands. The speech justifies the military law as a measure of security made necessary by increased armaments of neighboring countries.

WASHINGTON.

The Inter-State Commerce Bill.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 12.—The majority of the House Committee on Commerce do not intend to permit the inter-commerce bill to be reported in any shape. They want to kill it and are afraid the House would pass it if an opportunity were offered. If Reagan consents, Frost will introduce the original bill, and move its reference to the Committee on Railways and Canals. This will effectually flank the railroad movement against the bill, as the Railway Committee would undoubtedly report it favorably.

HAYES MAD.

Hayes is indignant at the Senate for rejecting the Ohio nominations for census supervisors, and says he intends to renominate the same men with one or two exceptions. He insists on his right to select the nominees and wants to deny the right of the Senate to advise and consent. There will probably be a lively fight over the census appointments yet. Missouri members are fighting Cahoon, and he probably will be rejected. The Democrats of his district protest against him because of his bitter partisanship.

PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The Committee on Pacific Railroads has postponed for two weeks the consideration of the bill extending the provisions of the sinking fund act. The Senate Committee reduced the appropriation for additional clerks in the Pension Bureau from $61,900 to $49,900, and for the War Department from $39,000 to $22,000. The Second Auditor will also have additional clerks to clear off the pension business.

THE REFUNDING QUESTION.

The House Committee on Ways and Means disposed of the refunding question this morning. The rate of interest was decided in favor of 3 1-2 per cent by a vote of seven to two. The question of time was settled by a decisive vote of twelve to one in favor of a 20-40 bond. Interest on these bonds to be paid quarterly, and they to be used in funding 5's and 6's amounting to about $560,000,000. The Committee decided also to recommend that authority be given the Secretary of the Treasury to issue $300,000,000 four per cent Treasury notes, redeemable at pleasure, to assist in the reduction of the annual interest burden in the manner proposed by Representative Kelly.

FORTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, February 12.—Senator Saunders introduced a bill to abolish all duties on the importation of salt.

Senator Garland introduced a bill to extend the time for the completion of the Texas and Pacific Railroad.

Senator Davis (W. Va.) said if the Senator from Georgia had been in his seat to-day he (Davis) would have moved to take up the motion to reconsider the vote appointing a special committee on the Inter-Oceanic Canal. Delay on this subject was not caused by him or his motion to reconsider. He was and had been ready to consider the matter at any time.

The calendar was then considered.

The bill granting a pension to Herman Netterfield, but reported upon adversely by Ingalls, from the Committee on Pensions, was taken up. Netterfield was a citizen scout acting under military orders when he was disabled. The discussion of this bill was upon the point whether scouts with the army should be paid pensions the same as soldiers disabled, and was interrupted by the morning hour expiring, when consideration was resumed of the bill for the ascertainment of the amount of land located on military warrants, and for the payment of 5 per cent of its value to the various States named, and McDonald continued his speech in favor of the bill.

House.

Senator Stephens, of the Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee, reported back five bills relative to the metric system of coinage. Printed and referred. For the making of ingots of fine gold and ingots of fine silver of the value of $100 each for exportation, manufactures, etc. 5. For the coinage of silver dollars and fractions thereof, of full standard value, upon the metric system.

The resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish the States, for the use of agricultural colleges, one set of standard weights and measures, passed.

Mr. Wells, from the Committee on Education and Labor, reported back the resolution calling on the President for information as to pending negotiations for a change of the treaty between the United States and the Government of China. Adopted.

The Speaker, on behalf of Mr. Ladd, asked the privileges of the floor for Mr. Wilson, of the Maine Legislature.

Page—Which one?

Speaker—The Chair is not informed on the subject.

Mr. Frye—The right one.

There was no objection, and the House resumed consideration of the court removal bill.

The morning hour expiring, the House went into a committee of the whole on the revision of the rules.

The amendment offered by White to the twenty-first rule, providing that no legislation be allowed to be placed upon appropriation bills by the Appropriation Committee, brought on political discussion.

Not Guilty.

Peter Dresen, who is accused by Officer Dee and John McCarthy with having committed an aggravated assault and battery upon the last named gentleman, was discharged upon hearing by Judge Cady.

SUCCOR TO THE STARVING.

Meeting at the Merchants' Exchange To-Day.

Five Thousand Dollars Raised for the Suffering Irish—The Good Work to Go On.

A public meeting was held on 'Change today pursuant to call to open the subscription list inaugurated by the Merchants' Exchange for the relief of the suffering people in the famine-stricken districts of Ireland.

Shortly after noon Mr. Alex Smith, President of the Exchange, mounted the rostrum. There were also on the platform Mr. Michael McEnnis, Geo. Bain, A. W. Slayback, Chas. Slayback, Commodore Kountz and others.

PRESIDENT SMITH'S ADDRESS.

President Smith procured silence by continuous rapping with the gavel, when he said:

This call comes from the other side of the ocean—a call of the famine-stricken people upon us to contribute from our abundance to their relief. The Irish people, as is well known to most of you, are dependent upon agriculture for their subsistence. They passed into the year 1879 with very scanty savings. Their growing and harvest season for the past year has been under a deluge of water. It rained for an average of five days out of every seven during the hot months of June, July and August, when we were groaning under a hot spell which by the way raised our abundant crops. They were wading around in the water trying to save what they could of their growing crops. The result is, as it has been, followed by an extreme winter, that a great number of these people are suffering for their bare food to keep them alive until they can make another crop. Our proposition is a practical one, to raise as much money as we can, to invest it in as many pounds of cheap, wholesome food as that money will buy, to forward it at the cheapest possible rates, preferably to some commercial body, to see it distributed to keep the breath alive in those people until better times come when they can take care of themselves. The question as to who, if anybody, is responsible for their present condition is not before us. It is simply a question of whether we will from our very great abundance contribute to keep these people alive for a few months until they can take care of themselves. It ought not to require a very great deal of talk. It never has heretofore in St. Louis for anything of that sort, but as it is good to warm you up I will introduce to you Mr. A. W. Slayback.

COL. SLAYBACK

stepped forward and addressed the meeting. He said: "I know that it is no ordinary occasion that would suspend your business at this hour and call me from my own tasks to address you, as that you are all prepared by your attendance here to act rather than to talk, to give rather than to listen. Here is a case well authenticated of starvation in a civilized country, where all the science of political economy of the nineteenth century has failed on account of the failure of the crops in Ireland to supply that people with food. We know that people; we know their generosity, we know their genius, we know their talent, we know their representative men in this country, and we may say with truthfulness that Ireland, more than any other country on earth, has been the cradle of America. It is from Ireland that we inherit our love of liberty, our hatred of wrong and tyranny."

The speaker then referred to the special feature of Irish humor of the peasantry and said that the wit of the Irish gentlemen found an echo in St. Louis in the wit of the Knights of St. Patrick. "In literature, in the arts, in oratory these people have excelled every people on the earth, and in one respect they excel all people on earth, and that is in relieving distress whenever it is brought to their notice. I never," continued Mr. Slayback, "appealed to an Irishman in my life when I was hungry that they did not feed me." After eulogizing the generous Celtic nature and their present sufferings, he said: "Can you men, situated here in the very garden of Eden—the Mississippi Valley—you, that are the bread kings of the earth; you, the sovereigns of the supplies which they now need; can you hesitate to send them a ship-load of provisions? Not to-morrow; not next week; not next month; but now. You are all rich and live in a rich country; You are, a great many of you, Irishmen, and you know it. New York is moving. A rich woman in England has given £500,000. This is no humbug. The people are starving." Mr. Slayback further said he had investigated the matter, the facts as laid before the people were true, and he asked them if they would let St. Louis be behind when all the country was moving. "You have some regard for the credit of St. Louis and the Mississippi Valley. I know your answer. It will be in a substantial way, and a credit to this community." Mr. Slayback concluded by putting his name down for two barrels of flour.

President Smith then introduced who, after saying that he did not come to make a speech or seek notoriety, continued: "I could not well discuss this question of the famine and misery now prevailing in Ireland if I did not refer to the causes which produce this misery. [Applause.] Gentlemen, I see that many of you sympathize with that suggestion, but this is not the proper place to refer to it. I speak of it because my worthy friend, the Chairman of the Committee, Mr. McEnnis, after he had stated that the cause was not to be discussed, after he had stated that this was not a matter to be mixed up with either religion or politics, in the exuberance of feeling saw fit to express an opinion about a man now traveling in this country who is to-day the leader of the Irish people (slight applause). I am not going to lug in any question of politics, gentlemen; but speaking for myself, and only for myself, I desire to state that his utterance was not the utterance of this Exchange. [Mingled hisses and applause.] I desire to say that Charles Stewart Parnell is not regarded by this exchange as a demagogue or communist. I desire to say that if Mr. Parnell is to be held aided before the world as a communistic demagogue you ought to include the Lord Mayor of Dublin whose utterances during the last few days have been far more incendiary than any uttered by Parnell, and also include John Bright, who said the fault was not with the Irish people, no t with their want of frugality; it was the infernal land system." Mr. Tansey spoke of the evils of absentee landlordism; how they squandered their money in London and Paris in gambling and other extravagances. He expatiated slightly on the virtues of the Celt, saying, however, "It would not be becoming of me as an Irishman by birth to say what the Irish have done for America." He referred to their exploits on the battle fields of America, and, exhorting the members to respond liberally, concluded by giving a donation of ten barrels of flour.

President Smith said in regard to some remarks of Mr. Tansey, "We can only meet here on the common ground of charity. Representign as we do all sorts of nationalities and shades of belief, we can only meet on the common ground of charity."

Mr. George Bain was appointed as receiver of the subscriptions, and calling off the names and amounts, announced that Francis Whittaker & Sons (of which Mr. McEnis is a partner) subscribed $500. The announcement was greeted with immense applause.

COMMODORE KOUNTZ

came forward and said: "I belog, gentlemen, a Dutch Irishman [laughter], want to say that I am prepared to transport from St. Louis to New Orleans on the first steamer by my line one hundred tons without charge." [Applause.]

The call for subscription then commenced and went briskly for some time. "Talk big, gentlemen—life is short," said Mr. Bain as he hauled in the subscription cards. The announcement of a $.00 donation by Jas. Meagher and $250 from Gerard B. Allen was greeted with rounds of applause.

Sid. Francis donated $5, when Bain said: "One of the gang, Sid; bring up the balance of the gang," and Dave Francis yelled out: "$25 for the gang."

"Where is the flour corner? I have not heard from them," shouted Mr. Bain. More subscriptions flowed in. "Modesty $5," he said, when an unknown subscription was passed up. Bill Hyde was applauded as he passed over $10 in cash.

"Where is Larimore?" again shouted Bain, as the subscriptions commenced to flag, and Larimore Bros. went down for ten barrels of flour.

At last the subscriptions ceased. The cash and total cash value of provisions subscribed amounted to $5,000. President Smith then announced that the sub-committees would meet to-morrow at 1 o'clock in the reading room to take up subscriptions and lay out their plan of campaign. The meeting then broke up. ASHES OF LOVE.

My cigarette! Can I forget
How Kate and I, in sunny weather,
Sat in the shade the elm tree made,
And rolled the fragrant weed together?
I, at her side, beatified
To hold and guide her fingers willing;
She, rolling slow the paper's snow,
Putting my heart in with the filling!

My cigarette! I see Kate yet—
The white smoke from her red lips curling,
Her dreaming eyes, her soft replies,
Her gentle sighs, and laughter purling!
Ah, dainty roll whose parting soul
Ebbs out in many a snowy billow.
I, too, would burn if I might earn
Upon her lips so sweet a pillow!

Ah, cigarette! The gay coquette
Has long forgot the flames she lighted,
And you and I unthinking by
Alike are thrown, alike are slighted.
The darkness gathers fast without,
A rain-drop on my window plashes;
My cigarette and heart are out,
And naught is left me but their ashes!

MASCULINE FASHIONS.

Nationality Betrayed by Peculiarities of Dress.

[From the Boston Herald.]

Much is written every day about ladies' fashions, very little about the dress of men or gentlemen. It will be objected that, from China to Peru, the stove-pipe hat and the tail-coat or jacket reign supreme. True; but each nation stamps its individuality on this common form. An Englishman looks entirely different from a Frenchman, and a Frenchman from an Italian. The Englishman is not expansive in his dress any more than he is in his habits and conversation; he readily adopts a rule, and follows it. If the summer fashion be a light gray frock coat and trousers and a black silk hat, every man in London who pays any attention to his dress will wear a light gray frock coat and a black silk hat. You might form a perfectly uniform regiment of the beaus who promenade on the shady side of Piccadilly and ogle the belles of the Burlington Arcade. The Frenchman will wear the same costume, but he will put his expansive nature into it and make it blossom with brandebourgs and borderings of silk and velvet; he will rebel against uniformity in spite of the tempting offers of enterprising tailors who make a costume complete for 35 francs. It will be observed that English coats button higher than French; the collars, the trimmings, if trimmings there be, are of the same material as the coat, which fits more tightly and correctly than the French. The shirt collar is lower and closer, and the wristbands are smaller. The English show less linen than the French, and they affect suits of the same material. When once a fashion has been adopted, it becomes an affair of caste; in France it is an affair of individuals. The French masculine costume has a tendency to greater freedom; everything becomes larger, especially the wristbands, and the further south you go the more this tendency becomes confirmed. Men of Latin origin may be recognized by the ampleness or the bow of their cravat, if by nothing else. An Anglo-Saxon would blush to wear a cravat emerging luxuriously over his dress. The jacket, too, in France tends to lose its buttons; it is capricious as a woman, and may have three, two or one button. The following is about the appearance of an elegant Frenchman in the present year of grace, 1880: Silk hat, rather low in the crown, and with a narrow brim; shirt collar upright and almost meeting in front; long black overcoat, coming down halfway between the knee and the ankle, with fur collar and cuffs; trousers of cheviot tweed; yellow gaiters, over very pointed shoes; chamois gloves stitched with blue; woolen gauntlets, and a cane with a steel or nickel knob. Men who respect themselves do not wear flowers in their buttonholes; waistcoats button rather high, so as to leave visible only one stud, which should be a black pearl. For evening dress, the bow of the cravat should be perfectly horizontal; the trousers a little wide at the bottom; the shoes of fine English patent leather, very open at the instep, ornamented with a bow of ribbon or a very small silver buckle. The wearer should endeavor, from time to time, to show his silk stocking of sombre colors, brown maroon, dark blue or black, with very small colored spots.

The White House and its Mistress.

[Olivia in the Philadelphia Times.]

It is an historic fact that the White House is modeled after the palace of the Duke of Leinster. This accounts for the lofty walls so decorated and beautified in frescoes that they resemble in intention, if not in genius, the noble creations wrought by Raphael and Michael Angelo. As the eye descends from the ceiling it rests upon the inlaid floor, but this is covered with carpeting so thick that the tramp of a regiment would be noiseless as phantom wings. Ebony furniture with richest satin upholstering, candelabra, which reach from floor to mantel, holding waxen candles all ready to light, pictures on the walls, huge baskets of flowers, with decorated pots of greenery scattered everywhere. In a row, like school girls in a class, stood the wives and daughters of the Cabinet officials, with Mrs. President Hayes at the head. That it was strictly "official" was proved by the order observed in their positions. Just as the Departments are ranked the women stood. State, then Treasury, War, Post-office, Interior and Attorney-General. Mrs. Hayes may safely be called a "handsome woman," and there will none be found brave enough to dispute the palm. A brunette of the purest tye, with large, brilliant eyes that convey the idea of surface but not depth—like a transparent window that opens into space—a rather low, Greek forehead, over which is banded that shining mass of satin hair. The glossy coronet could be improved by wave or bangs; but the dark, rich brunette complexion forbids this modern fashion, and Mrs. Hayes is an artist in one or more ways. Clad in rich, ruby satin and silk combination, the corsage square and low, as Pompadour invented to call attention to her charms, no fault can be found with Mrs. Hayes, for her dress is as costly and showy as any worn by the celebrated beauties who flourished in the Cabinet during the Grant reign. Mrs. Hayes has invented a way to shake hands, which ought to be known to the official world, as it saves this useful member from crushing annihilation. Never give your fingers to the crowd, and instead of allowing your hand to be seized, grasp the unruly enemy by the hand as far as the unfortunate thumb will permit you to go, one vigorous squeeze, and the torment is over. All this is done on the same principle of a collision at sea. It is the vessel that is hit that sustains all the harm.

Danger in the Electric Light.

[From the New York Sun.]

The electric light is not without its dangers. Some time ago a red hot morsel of carbon dropped from one of the lamps at the British Museum to a table usually occupied by readers. Measures were at once taken to prevent the recurrence of such an accident, but not with complete success, for a few days later a similar piece of red hot carbon fell from the center lamp to the table of the superintendent of the reading room, upon a piece of loose paper, which began to kindle into flame. This, however, was speedily extinguished. It is conceivable that a single spark might do irretrievable damage to some unique manuscript or other priceless example of literary production. Large transparent glass or table saucers have been suspended below each lamp, so as to intercept any stray piece of carbon which may happen to fall in the future. It is even proposed to try the experiment of lighting the room from outside, in which case the glass of the central part of the dome would offer a most effectual protection.

The Burned Dublin Theater.

[From the N. Y. World, 10th.]

"Yes," said one of a group of actors who were standing near George Brown's chop-house yesterday when a World reporter informed them that a cable dispatch announced that the Theatre Royal at Dublin was on fire; "I bet the old rookery will go entirely. It was a big play-house—the largest in Ireland; and in the kingdom only the Drury Lane and Covent Garden and Victoria exceeded it in size. It was too big for anything but demonstrations, spectacles, pantomimes and the like. It wasn't much to look at on the outside, but inside it seemed to be as big as all out-doors. On its stage a squadron of cavalry could be wheeled, and apparently any number of people could be packed into its auditorium. I remember once seeing it full. It was on the occasion of the visit of the American rifle team to Ireland in July, 1875. They brought an American summer night with them, and the theater was very hot in consequence. That evening there was to be a formal reception to the team, and everybody was anxious to see the lions of the day. The pit was packed solid, and for several hours men stood there holding each other up waiting for the appearance of Col. Gildersleeve and his companions. The roar of applause which went up when the team did appear was loud enough to be heard at the Castle and away over College Green. A feature of the evening's programme was the singing of 'The Star-Spangled Banner' by Miss Bessie Sudlow, who had just arrived in Ireland from America after having sung for a season here. The audience may have thought her singing of the American song good, and at any rate applauded it out of compliment to the team. The most accessible and the favorite theater of Dublin is the Gaiety, under the management of the Messrs. Gunn. It is the favorite comedy theater of the Irish capital, while the Exposition Building is the favorite resort for large concerts and performances. The Theatre Royal was allowed to rest in a great deal of silent grandeur, as only some special attraction could fill its enormous interior. This fire is the first that has occurred in a Dublin play-house for many years, and will be ranked among the great fires of the Irish capital. In 1875 there was a large fire which destroyed the distilleries on Chambers street. At that time the firemen to put out the fire stove in the heads of many hundred barrels of whisky, and liquor ran down the gutters, and many of the crowd, using their shoes as ladles, drank the raw, crude stuff. Several died in consequence."

MORE ENOCH ARDEN BUSINESS.

The Romance in the Life of a Colored Soldier.

[Cor. of the Cincinnati Commercial.]

A rather remarkable case of the Enoch Arden order has just come to light in this city, which is worthy of a detailed mention, and if the parties were of marked social standing, would be made highly sensational. Before the breaking out of the war there lived in this city a colored man named John W. Harper. I believe, upon second thought, he was born here. He fell in love with a dusky maiden named Frankie French, and they lived happily together, one child being the result of their union. When the war broke out Harper felt it his duty to shoulder a musket and go into the field to fight for his country, and, first obtaining the consent of his young wife, he enlisted. She never heard from him again until the news came that he had been killed in battle, and as no word ever reached her ears rebutting this story, time and his silence seemed to confirm it. Finally, about ten or twelve years ago a young and industrious colored gentleman named John Terrell sued for her hand and it was accepted and they were married. Since then they have lived pleasantly together, with no thought that the former husband would ever appear in their presence this side of the judgment. This delusion, freighted as it was with joy, was only to be dispelled, and who should step into our city a few days ago but this identical John W. Harper, all rigged out in a new suit of regulation blue, typical of the soldier regular army of the United States. He did not come, however, to claim his wife, for he no longer regarded her as his, for he had long since learned that she, acting upon the impression that he was dead, had married again. He, in turn, had himself taken a New Orleans girl for a wife, and was now the happy father of seven children, all of whom were living in Texas, and he was supporting them from his position in the regular service.

When Terrell heard that Harper was in town, he called upon him, and they exchanged the most friendly greetings, and, like sensible men, regarded the matter in the light of a romantic episode, and determined to not let it estrange them in the least. Terrell invited Harper to call and see his little family, increased to four since Mrs. Harper had became Mrs. Terrell, but I do not know that he will accept the kind invitation. Harper, it was reported, had come back to reclaim his wife, and the situation of affairs was looked upon as rather delicate until the facts above related came to light. The now Mrs. Terrell evidently believed that this was his purpose, for she had consulted a lawyer to know what her legal duty was in the premises, and he had told her that the law had occupied neutral grounds in such cases, and left her to elect which husband she preferred. A weight of responsibility was lifted from her shoulders, however, when she learned the facts. Harper is here only to see his old friends, and will return to his regiment in a few days. This case opens a field for Kate Claxton to improve her "Double Marriage."

Grant as a Circus Advertiser.

[Havana (Cuba) Cor. New York Sun.]

General Grant has been very quiet since his arrival here. He is already tired of the palace, and has engaged rooms at the Hotel Pasage from Saturday next. A stroll about the city during the morning, and a drive to the Paseo in the afternoon, constitute the amusement of the day. There have been no entertainments given in his honor yet. The banquet last week at which he was present was given in honor of the King's birthday, and on Monday night's reception it was not General or Mrs. Grant, but the Captain-General who received. There is a curious law here which requires the Captain-General always to remain in Havana. If he leaves the city, another is appointed in his place, not as a locum tenens, but as a new appointment. At present Senor Blanco, the real Captain-General, is absent from the city, and General Calleja, who has taken his place, gives a reception every Monday night at his own house. Last Monday night, as General Grant was staying at the palace, Senor Calleja gave his reception there.

Gen. Grant did not know anything about it until he saw in a newspaper that he was to be present at it. He had made another engagement for that evening to visit the Circo Metropolitano, and large bills had been stuck on every available wall announcing that the performance would be "dedicated to the General of the United States, Mr. U. S. Grant." As a further incentive to visit the circus, every lady was promised a bouquet of flowers, and every gentleman a "U. S. Grant" cigar. When it was found that he could not be present, the management closed their doors and said that the roof had fallen in. The Cubans did not complain, but, shrugging their shoulders, threw the blame upon the earthquake. On Tuesday night, however, the Grant party attended the performance at the Circo, and all the former disappointments were forgotten.

A Model Bridal Tour.

[From the New York World.]

John Gilpin was thin, callow and awkward; Ella Sanford, bonnie, buxom and loving. They worked on neighboring farms at Middletown, Conn., and last Wednesday they went before the 'Squire and were married. The next thing on the programme was the wedding tour. Neither had money. Both had good, stout shoes. Keeping excellent step as both hearts beat as one, they set out to walk to Woodbury to visit John's old folks. Wednesday night found them on the road pushing on through the snow. All day Thursday they pressed on, and as night fell they stopped at a little inn by the roadside. John was very much used up on Friday because of the long walk, but Ella lent him a shoulder, and so the wedding tour was continued. As the two approached within four or five miles of Woodbury John gave out, the persons who kindly asked what was the matter heard only from Ella a request to borrow a wheelbarrow. At last, when a neighboring farmer learned that the pedestrians had just been married, he lent them a barrow, and, tenderly placing the groom in this, the bride wheeled him in triumph to the old folks in Woodbury.

BABY DIMPLE'S HOUSE.

Block upon block, block upon block;
Wait, baby, wait till the time to knock;
Hush, Baby Dimple, still as a mouse!
This is the way to build a house.

What shall it be—a church so high,
With a steeple up to the very sky?
First we will build a good thick wall—
Still, baby, still! or you'll spoil it all;
Block upon block, till all is complete;
That is the way to build, my sweet!]

Here is the door, and here is the steeple;
Within are the preacher and all the people;
Now, baby, now, for the final shock!
Ah! that was only a tiny knock;
Once again, Dimple—one, two, three!
Over it goes, in your merry glee!
And that is the end of the church and the steeple;
But where are the preacher and all the people?

HAYES' LAST RECEPTION.

The White House in a Blaze of Glory—Mrs. Astor's Diamonds.

[Washington Special to the Chicago Tribune, 11th.]

The entertainment at the White House tonight in honor of the Diplomatic Corps was a fit conclusion to the gay season to be ended in a few hours by the matin bells of Lent summoning the faithful to the religious observances of Ash Wednesday. The invitations were extended to members of Congress, officers of the army above the rank of Captain, officers of the navy above the rank of Lieutenant-Commander, the Cabinet, and heads of bureaus, and the leading newspaper correspondents resident here. Requests by Congressmen and others for invitations for visiting friends were positively declined, and the company was more select than is generally seen at the White House. The invitations fixed the hour of assembling at 8 o'clock, and the diplomats were promptly on hand. A private entrance for their exclusive use had been improvised at the basement door, and on alighting from their carriages there they were escorted to dressing-rooms fitted up for their use, and thence to the Red Parlor, where Secretary Evarts awaited them and escorted them into the East Room, where he introduced them to the President and Mrs. Hayes. Mrs. Hayes invited Lady Thornton to aid her and she stood at the right hand of Mrs. Hayes during the evening.

After the Diplomatic Corps had been presented, the other guests began to present themselves. The East Room, in which the reception took place, was exquisitly decorated with flags and flowers; rare exotics were banked in front of each of the four fire-places; the mantels were covered with bouquets, and the chandeliers were decked with smilax. The whole house was thrown open, and everywhere gay flags fluttered, while the rarest flowers were displayed in great profusion. The Marine Band, in their scarlet uniforms, were in the outer vestibule, and performed choice selections from operas during the evening. Sir Edward Thornton, the Doyen, or eldest member of the Diplomatic Corps, wore the blue uniform, heavily embroidered in gold, of a Knight Commander of the Bath, and the other diplomats wore the dresses of their respective courts, with the insignia of the Order of Knighthood to which they belong. The Turks wore their scarlet fez caps, and a Hungarian Huzzar uniform was specially noticeable.

Lady Thornton wore white satin with lace, and her two daughters were dressed in white satin and tulle.

NEARLY ALL THE LADIES of the Diplomatic Corps were dressed in white silk and satin, and some of them wore magnificent diamonds or other jewels.

The other guests entered by the north or main entrance, and were shown up-stairs. The executive offices were fitted up as gentlemen's dressing-rooms, with convenient receptacles for hats and coats, for which checks were given. The bedrooms were used as ladies' dressing rooms, an arrangement never before made at the Executive Mansion. When the ladies left their dressing-rooms and joined their escorts, the guests went down the private staircase and along the corridor into the East Room, where the President and Mrs. Hayes, with the Diplomatic Corps, awaited them. As the column moved around the east room and approached the President, it presented a brilliant mosaic of humanity. There were grave Senators, deeply engrossed in Presidential plots, elegantly dressed ladies, looking anxiously to see what other ladies wore, army and navy men, some of them in outgrown uniforms and others gay with bright buttons and gold lace; young belles, with wonder and delight on their beautiful countenances, grave judges and blushing school girls; the blondes of New England and the brunettes of the Sunny South.

AT THE LEFT OF THE PRESIDENT

stood one of his sons, into whose ear those whom he did not know whispered their names, and all were individually presented. The guests were then presented by Colonel Casey to Mrs. Hayes, who wore a white silk dress embroidered in gold with a court train, and a silver comb and pearls in her hair.

Lady Thornton stood next to Mrs. Hayes, and next to her was Mrs. Astor, of New York, who wore a white silk dress with her wondrous diamonds, the estimated value of which is $800,000, and which are so precious that two detectives attend even in the President's household. The ladies of the Diplomatic Corps, some of whom have fine sets of diamonds, all agreed that they had never seen such a collection of diamonds worn even by royalty as was that of Mrs. Astor.

Nearly every Western Congressman, with his family, was in attendance. Mrs. Secretary Evarts was dressed in black silk; Mrs. Secretary Ramsey in black velvet and lace; Mrs. Postmaster-General Key in a rich garnet satin and light pink brocade combined with point-lace; Mrs. Assistant Postmaster-General Tyner wore a cream-colored and brocade velvet, trimmed across the front with seed pearls, and ornamented with large bunches of cardinal flowers.

Secretary Schurz escorted one of his daughters, who was dressed in white. General Sherman, in full uniform, escorted his two daughters, who were dressed in blue. Ex-Attorney-General Williams was present with Mrs. Williams, as beautiful as ever, her first reappearance in Washington society.

Meanwhile, tea, coffee and chocolate had been served through the evening, and at 10 o'clock Secretary Evarts escorted Lady Thornton to the state dining-room, where a sumptuous repast had been provided. The usual supper table fusillade of champagne corks was not heard, and there were not the consequent exhibitions of maudlin intoxication so common at a Washington entertainment.

An Athletic Thief.

[From the Philadelphia Bulletin.]

A rogue, who has regaled himself in twenty or more cellars in Philadelphia, is now under arrest. The detectives who have examined the houses which had been entered ascertained that in every case the top cross-piece of the shutter had been partially bored into, and the thief, clutching the handle of the augur or gimlet as a lever, had forced the bored one open by sheer strength. It indicated that a very muscular and agile thief had done the work, and that in each case he had mounted upon the narrow, projecting stone sill at the foot of the shutter while at work. Once in the house the thief in every case first proceeded to regale himself with provisions and dainties, not forgetting to wash all down with any liquor that was handy. At one house, not content with absorbing two bottles of wine, he carried away a third, and at another place drank about a pint of strong brandy. This queer cracksman never appeared to venture beyond the first-story apartments, and took away only such light plunder in the way of jewelry, furs, ornaments and overcoats as could be readily carried on his person. Descriptions of the stolen articles were sent around among the pawnbrokers, but not until Sunday was the thief arrested. When asked how he managed to get into the houses, he said: "Oh, that was nothing for me. I'm a gymnast. All I did was to vault over the back fences and then get the gimlet at work on the shutter and away she came. When the gimlet gave out I had to use my hands. I didn't stay at any lodging place over a day. When I got into a house of course I went for the grub. I thought it would only be wasted anyhow and the folks wouldn't miss it. I generally went into a house about 12 and stayed until 5 in the morning, eating and drinking. I saved a night's lodging by that. I always took an overcoat that came near fitting me."

Kleptomania in England.

[From the New York Times.]

About eight years ago an alarm reached the Chief Police office in London that jewels of great value had been stolen from a lady of high rank while a guest at a quiet northern country house. A handsome reward was offered, and not long afterward it became known that the property had been recovered. Astounding as it may seem, it is nevertheless true, that the temporary appropriator of these fine things was a millionaire Peer, who, albeit is nowise penurious, is singularly simple in his personal habits, and does not spend one-fourth of his income. The matter was all hushed up, and very few persons outside the family knew who the thief, if we can so call him, really was. This was a genuine case of kleptomania, and proves beyond doubt that it really exists. An English Earl of high distinction had this weakness from boyhood, and it involved his leaving Eton. When, in after years, he entered the Cabinet, it was rumored that Lord ——— had entirely conquered the propensity, "except that at a Cabinet council he never could resist 'Dizzy's' new green kid gloves." The alarming disappearance of wax candles at the Travelers' Club, London, some years ago, caused much dismay. The mystery was at length solved by a member of the committee seeing the old Duke of C. (with a clear $750,000 a year) ambling along a corridor with a candle-sticking out of each coat-tail pocket. His family were communicated with, and his Grace ceased to come to the club. Possibly, a similar tendency may perhaps explain an untoward incident which occurred last season at Newport, and has lately been recalled by a concatenation of curious circumstances. There is doubtless a great deal of sham kleptomania, but it is not the less true that sometimes it is perfectly genuine. It is, however, very unfortunate to be at once kleptomaniac and impecunious.

The Drought in Western Texas.

[From the New York Times.]

Gov. Roberts, of Texas, has written a reply dated January 30 to a letter of inquiry respecting the effects of the drought in that State. He says: "Last year during crop-time we had a protracted drought in the western portion of Texas which cut off the crops badly, especially where they were not well cultivated, that has produced great scarcity of provisions and means to buy them among the people in some regions of the West. In Middle, Eastern and Northern Texas, embracing three-fourths of the farming interest of Texas, fair crops of cotton and corn have been made, and in some portions large crops of cotton have been made, and the increased price of cotton has made the farmers more easy in their circumstances than they have been for years back, and this applies to three-fourths of the farming region in the whole of Texas. One main reason that the drouth of last summer had so bad an effect on crops in the western part of Texas, or at least portions of it, was that there was but little rain there in the winter of 1878-9, which made the crops late and prevented them from being put in well. But this year in Western Texas we have good rains up to the present time, and the farmers are putting their grounds already in good condition for planting, which in this country by early planting almost always insures a good crop, which is usually so abundant, with the advantages of pasturage, as to make up for the scarcity of the previous year. In fine I would say that during a residence in Texas of nearly forty years, and having traveled over a large part of it, I have never known any man to suffer for the necessaries of life who would work."

The Whipping-Post in Delaware.

[Newcastle Cor. Wilmington Every Evening.]

The whipping-post punishment of criminals convicted of larceny at the term of court just closed came off this morning, at or about 10:15 o'clock, the culprits being five in number, three colored and two white. The first one brought out was Andrew Harman, colored, who was to receive twenty lashes. At first sight of the post a perceptible tremor passed over him, whether from cold or fear, we do not know, but he took his whipping well. William Jackson, colored, the next candidate, stepped firmly to the post, received his twenty lashes stoically and went away smiling. John Temple, a white man, then walked up and received five lashes, apparently suffering a good deal. Frank Davis, also white, received twenty, but didn't seem to mind the twenty as much as Temple did his five. The last was Charles Dillahay, colored, who took his punishment good-naturedly and without flinching and when the Sheriff was through began laughing and remarked, "Pooh, I could take twenty more." This ended the punishment by the cat for this term. There was a less number of spectators than usual, and but one or two representatives of the press. Among the spectators was the Hon. Mr. McElroy, of Michigan, who witnessed the terrible (so-called) infliction of the cat-o'-nine-tails for the first time, and expressed himself as thoroughly convinced that our mode of punishing criminals is much less barbarous than has been represented.

Some Political Mysteries.

[Washington Cor. New York Sun.]

Certain events have been witnessed here lately which tend to mystify the political prognosticators of the hotel lobbies and department corridors. This afternoon Don Cameron and James G. Blaine walked down the avenue arm-in-arm. This demonstration of Senatorial affection is looked upon much in the same light as the appearance together in public of a husband and his wife's friend after a domestic scandal would be. Last Sunday Don Cameron and ex-Senator John Patterson, of South Carolina, took a promenade together. The wise heads regard this as an evidence that Patterson is to use his influence in Maryland and South Carolina in behalf of Grant. Patterson is now managing a street railroad in Baltimore. Shortly before the Harrisburg Convention was held, a caller at Blaine's house saw John Sherman and the Senator from Maine in close consultation together in Blaine's back parlor. What the significance of this powwow was nobody but the parties concerned seem to know.

As to Oysters.

[From the New York Herald.]

Germans and Frenchmen in New York usually take their raw oysters from the deep shell, thus saving much of the juice, which they highly esteem. Englishmen prefer little salt oysters, and as East Rivers, this year, are not very good, Cherry Stones, which are now in prime condition, are the favorites. Neither the Shrewsburys nor the Blue Points are very good this year. It is a fact that many Americans who have learned to eat the English "natives" come in time to prefer them to the best of our American kinds.

THE Paris Globe relates that an ex-Colonel of the National Guard, Saint Leger by name, died recently at Paris, leaving a legacy of 60,000 francs to the country town of Commines for the purpose of founding a school, with the condition that priests should be possitively excluded from it, and that a marble tablet placed on the facade of the school should record the fact that the testator had been buried without any religious ceremony. The Municipal Council of Commines has refused to accept the legacy on the plea of immorality. The Colonel's lawful heirs heartily applaud the action of the authorities.

A NEW religious denomination called the "Methodist Free Church" has been organized in Mississippi. It is a sort of ecclesiastical mixture, being compounded of some of the elements of Congregationalism, some of Presbyterianism, and some of Methodism. As yet the roll of its members is small, and it does not seem to take Mississippi by storm. As is usual in the formation of such denominations the brethren composing the little coterie were malcontents in the churches to which they formerly belonged.

GENEROUS MACKAY.

A Bonanza Man's Remembrance of Old Ireland.

[From the New York Herald, February 10.]

Among the checks received yesterday for the Herald Relief Fund was one from Mr. John W. Mackay, of Virginia City, for $10,000. The heart of Mr. Mackay can only be compared to the famous "Big Bonanza," of which he is called the "Boss." He has not made this munificent gift because he is rich, but because he is generous. The noblest product of that celebrated mine is not its fabulous amounts of silver, but the large-souled men whose faculties it has developed and supplied with the means of exhibiting the scale on which nature formed them. We commend Mr. Mackay's truly resplendent gift to the notice and emulation of other men in Nevada and California and throughout the country whom Providence has richly blessed in their enterprises. It is no new thing for Mr. Mackay to be generous. A few years ago, when traveling in Italy with Mr. Florence, the actor, a poor, weary tinker, wheeling his barrow, came along to the humble inn where they were stopping. Mr. Mackay gave him the first hearty dinner the poor wayfarer had had in a long time, and when he came to express his gratitude Mr. Mackay slipped several gold pieces into his hand—more money than the needy fellow hall ever possessed in his life. A well known American impresario visited Europe with a band of singers, and when his adventure failed and he found himself in debt and distress Mr. Mackay ascertained the amount of his losses and gave him a check for fifteen thousand dollars. Another of the frequent instances of Mr. Mackay's generosity which has come to our knowledge arose on board a European steamer. He took an interest in the physician, and, learning that he did not like his mode of life on a steamship, Mr. Mackay, after landing, sent his fellow voyager a bank book, with a credit of five thousand dollars, and thus enabled him to establish a practice more to his liking. Mr. Mackay, who is of Irish birth, went to California on one of the earliest waves of the gold excitement, and for a long period was not prosperous. In those days he was frequently heard to express the wish that he could get together twenty-five thousand dollars to make the declining years of his dear Irish mother comfortable. The immense wealth he has since acquired could not have fallen into more deserving hands. Mr. Mackay is only forty-five years of age, and there will be many prayers that his life may long be spared for deeds of kindness and mercy. Readers will perhaps recollect that Mrs. Mackay, who resides in Paris to educate her children, gave to the ex-President the most elegant and brilliant private entertainment he received in that capital.

Orthography and Statesmanship.

[Washington Cor. of New York Tribune.]

The fight over the nomination of Mr. Simmons, of Georgia, to be a supervisor of the census may possibly cause a permanent split in the Democratic party in Georgia. One of the objections urged by Senator Gordon and his friends against Mr. Simmons is that he is illiterate, and it is especially said that Mr. Simmons is a poor speller. This appears to be quite a grave objection in the minds of Southern Democrats to any candidate for office; but sometimes Southern Democrats whose orthography is not irreproachable do get into office. It may be remembered, for example, that the first Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives of the XLIVth Congress spelled "nigger" with one "g," and that may possibly have been one of the reasons why he was removed.

There is another Democratic statesman in Washington, still in office, who has views of his own about spelling. It is said that this gentleman, one morning not long ago, after late conviviality, sent out a written order for a "reviver" in the following words: "Please send me 2 burben cocktails." This gentleman holds an office higher than that of Census Supervisor; but his orthographical eccentricities may not be known to his intelligent constituents.

Peter J. Taafe and Mary Ann Donnelly vs.
William Zeppenfeld et al.

It appearing from the affidavit heretofore filed herein that the defendants, Oscar Simons and Hermann Nieman, are non-residents, or conceal themselves so that the ordinary summons cannot be executed upon them by the Sheriff, wherefore, on motion of said plaintiffs, by attorney, it is ordered that said defendants, Oscar Simons and Hermann Nieman, be notified that a civil action has been commenced against them, the object and general nature of which is to obtain a decree enforcing a deed of trust recorded in the Recorder's office of the city of St. Louis, in book 557, page 43, executed by Robert W. Zeppenfeld to Peter J. Taafe, as trustee for Mary Ann Donnelly, on the following property, situated in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri, and is known and described as follows: Lot No. 8 in Block No. 203 of said city, having a front of 20 feet on the southern side of Carondelet avenue, running with the same width southwardly 120 feet to a 15-foot alley, according to the corrected plat of James G. Soulard's subdivision of blocks Nos. 203 and 204, of the city of St. Louis, duly recorded in the Recorder's office of St. Louis, Missouri, and declared and fixed as a valid and subsisting lien on said property for the extent of the balance and interest due on the notes secured by said deed of trust, together with reasonable attorney's fees for the prosecution, and that the lease from Robert W. Zeppenfeld to Hermann Nieman, for the sole and separate use of Emma Zeppenfeld, recorded in the Recorder's office of the city of St. Louis, in book 596, page 367, and the deed from Robert W. Zeppenfeld to Oscar Simons, recorded in book 607, page 63, and the deed from Simons to Wilhelm Zeppenfeld, recorded in book 607, page 102, be declared fraudulent, null and void against plaintiff, and that the property be sold to satisfy the sum due plaintiff with interest and costs of suit and said attorney's fees; and that if said property be not sufficient to satisfy said claim plaintiff Donnelly to have a personal decree against defendant William Zeppenfeld; and, unless they appear at the term of this Court to be begun and held at the city of St. Louis, within and for the city of St. Louis, on the first Monday of April next, and, on or before the third day thereof, answer the plaintiff's petition, the same will be taken against them as confessed, and decree rendered as prayed for.

INDIA is the land of pestilence and famine, and yet Bombay sends $2,500 to starving Ireland.

BARONESS BURDETT-COUTTS is not so liberal as was at first supposed. She only gives $25,000 to Ireland, but stands prepared to do better.

THE Irish relief meeting on 'Change this morning was a great success. About $6,000 worth of provisions and money was subscribed, and it looks now as though the St. Louis ship was un fait accompli.

JOHN SHERMAN has expressed the opinion that a portion of our national blessing can be funded at a less rate than four per cent. John might improve his Presidential chances by flinging a three per cent bond on the market now.

IT is a mistake to suppose that Col. Tom Crittenden is having everything his own way in the pursuit of the Governorship. The poet Shelley, of Kansas City, is preparing to tramp down the primroses in the western part of the State as soon as the weather settles.

ST. LOUIS hotel proprietors have pledged themselves to treat the Democrats tenderly in the event that they select our city as the place for holding the next National Convention. The fact that they treated everybody well the last time is sufficient guarantee of their honest intentions now.

IT is publicly charged in the Cheyenne Leader that the Rev. Governor Hoyt, of Wyoming, is a libertine and a gross sensualist, who is excluded from good society on account of his gallantry and general Don Juanishness. Senators Conkling and Carpenter should mildly rise and propose an investigation.

AN Ohio Congressman named Finley has laid the ropes to obtain a little political popularity by drafting a bill to equalize soldiers' bounties. His scheme will cost the Government $1,000,000, besides the expense of 250 additional clerks in the Second Auditor's office for a period of four years. The country has certainly had enough of this sort of humbug.

THE San Francisco Sand-lotters are moving against the railway companies which employ Chinamen as laborers. A provision of the new Kearney Constitution prohibits corporations from giving work or encouragement to the despised Mongolians. If the railway managers neglect the first call of the unemployed Sand-lot gentlemen, they stand a good chance to have their tracks torn up and their buildings in San Francisco burned down.

A LOT of rich merchants in New York city have been making an effort recently to boost the Sherman movement. The effort did not produce pay dirt. If Sherman has any friends at all they are liable to be located around the big banks and the large mercantile establishments of New York city. As a matter of fact, the men with the money bags seem to have an idea that Grant is the only gentleman capable of providing the country with a simon-pure, stable Government.

WE are told from Washington that if Congress passes the bill restoring General Fitz John Porter to the army and giving him arrears of pay, Mr. Hayes will veto it. We think there has been entirely too much of Mr. Porter, and that vindication without pay is about as much as he has a right to expect. But Mr. Hayes shows bad taste in setting his veto power against Congress in a case of this kind. However, as Mr. Hayes is about as contemptible and unpopular as it is possible for a man to be, it won't make much difference what he does in the brief season of official life that yet remains to him.

SOME stir has been created in Washington by the appearance of Don Cameron and James G. Blaine strolling arm in arm along the avenue. If the fiery Tybalt had been seen ambling pleasantly along the streets of Verona in cheerful converse with a member of the house of Montague the occasion would not have given rise to more gossip than this unexpected case of hobnobbing between Blaine and Cameron. There is but one logical explanation to be offered. Brother Blaine has accepted the inevitable and has gone in to accept a second lieutenancy under Grant. He is advancing in years and, finding the Presidential grapes a little high, he has made up his mind that it were better to be Vice-President than not to be near the throne. There is just a bare possibility that he has missed it, but those who have watched the undulations of the Blaine boom will conclude that James has shown his wisdom. A coalition of the Grant and Blaine forces will make the work of the Chicago Convention purely formal and clerical.

WE find in the Globe-Democrat this morning an able article on the subject of the Geneva Award fund, in which it is suggested that the Government should take the $9,000,000 in the Treasury which it collected from England for its citizens, and credit the same to the war account, thereby reducing the national debt and lightening taxes. We remember reading a couple of years ago some excellent articles in the Globe-Democrat in support of the doctrine that this unexpended balance should be at once handed over to the insurance companies to whom the money was originally awarded by the arbitrators. Our views on this great question were determined by the clear, logical, legal arguments of our contemporary at that time. If, as is now alleged by the Globe-Democrat, our Government obtained more money from Great Britain than it was entitled to at Geneva, the proper thing to do would be to return it to Her Majesty's exchequer. Inasmuch, however, as our Government stole the French spoliation money and has either withheld or misappropriated every trust fund confided to its care, it would be simply carrying out our policy of national dishonesty to steal this Geneva Award balance instead of distributing it in accordance with the express terms of the award.

DEMOCRATIC PROSPECTS.

General Grant will be the Republican candidate. There can be no doubt about that. But there can be no doubt about another vitally important fact—General Grant will be nominated by the Cameron-Conkling-Robeson-Logan machine. He will owe his nomination to the worst manipulations of the worst political packers of primaries and conventions, and not to the people. Since the Harrisburg convention there can be no longer any doubt that not only the better classes, but the great mass, the overwhelming majority of Republicans are opposed to a third term. Nevertheless Grant will be nominated by the "machine." Then most of the anti-Grant Republicans will submit. Blaine will submit and take the stump for Grant. So will John Sherman. So will most of the anti-Grant leaders. It will be a desperate campaign. The Republican standpoint must be that the "life of the nation" is still at stake, that Grant is again as necessary to "save the country" as he was in 1864, that the "solid South" and the "Confederate brigadiers" are just as dangerous as they were during the war, that a "strong man" is needed at the helm, that those "who caused the war, with all its terrible sufferings, should not govern those who saved the Union," etc., etc., etc. Grant's nomination means this standpoint, means war, war, war, means an appeal for a "solid North," means the arousing of the worst passions, sectional, national, and even religious, by the most desperate demagogues and partisans this country ever witnessed.

Yet Grant will not be elected.

The great fallacy of the day is to assume Democratic weakness because the party does not present one person of great prestige and fame upon whom it has united. "Who is your man?" is the usual inquiry by Republicans.

The Democratic candidate is the Great Unknown.

Whoever shall be nominated will receive the cordial support of the party. Whoever receives that support will be elected as against Grant, who will repel independent voters and can expect nothing but the strict party vote—which is notoriously in a minority.

People should read and remember American history. It is full of examples against Grant, full of evidence that Presidential candidates who have the greatest name and prestige are defeated by comparatively obscure opponents, by men who were hardly known before their nomination.

Remember the Polk campaign of 1844. The Whigs had swept the country at the preceding election of 1840. They had the Government and the prestige of the successful party. They had Henry Clay as their Presidential candidate—probably the best known American of that day. The Democrats, to the utter astonishment of the country, nominated Polk, a perfect obscurity. It was said that after Polk's nomination no man was safe. In point of personal renown, personal magnetism and talents, a more striking contrast could not be imagined than that between the illustrious Clay and the unknown Polk. During the whole campaign Clay had the noise, bluster and apparent enthusiasm, as Grant may have it, on his side. Yet Clay was badly beaten and Polk became President.

Remember the campaign of 1852. The Whigs had again carried the country under General Taylor at the preceding election of 1848. They again had the prestige of success, and the Governmental machine. Their candidate for the Presidency was General Winfield Scott—the "great hero of the Mexican war"—than whom certainly no American had greater renown or prestige at that day. The Democrats again astonished the country by nominating a small man from a small State—Pierce, from little New Hampshire. Again, Gen. Scott had the apparent enthusiasm of the people, had the great noise and bluster; yet when the votes were counted he was found overwhelmingly beaten. The Democrats themselves were astonished at the magnitude of their victory, Pierce carrying 254 electoral votes against Gen. Scott's 42!

If Gen. Grant is nominated he will have great military prestige and noise and bluster and enormous money interests to aid him. But he cannot buy votes enough to be elected. He can only be elected by an improbable act of Democratic stupidity. He will have to run not only against a Democratic candidate, backed by a thoroughly united and enthusiastic party, but against American history, against American traditions and precedents, against the power of momentous issues, ideas and patriotic feeling, against the logic of common-sense and self-government, against the example and teachings of Washington, Jefferson and Jackson—against the very pledges and platforms of his own party.

If Grant is nominated, history will repeat itself, and he will be defeated just as Clay, Scott, Cass and Van Buren were—by comparatively obsure men.

But who will be this Great Unknown?

OUR SAUCY GENERAL.

IT is about time for the American people to pause and ask themselves whither they are drifting and whether there are any citizens in this country whom the General of the Army is bound to respect. Recently Representative Speer, of Georgia, introduced in the lower house of Congress a bill to prohibit the bands of the Army from playing on Sunday. Mr. Speer is not only a religious man, but he is one of those choice spirits who lay awake of nights in dyspeptic efforts to hit upon some ingenious plan by which the Government can be induced to save a dollar or two a year by the practice of Poor Richard's school of economy. Mr. Speer discovered years ago that the army bands were offending Deity by the performance of purely secular music on Sunday, and he estimated that the cost to the Government in the wear and tear of instruments on that day and the destruction of drum-heads amounted to over $100 per annum. In order to save this expense and at the same time establish the religious credit of our country, Mr. Speer offered his bill providing for the putting down of the horns of the military ungodly on Sunday. General Sherman, who is an infidel and a man of sin, was very naturally incensed at this proposition to deprive the army of its Sunday music. He sat down and wrote a letter to Speer in which he swore that if the bill was passed he would immediately withdraw the troops in garrison at Atlanta so that the Georgia gentleman's constituency would be deprived of music and display on week days as well as on Sunday. The garrison at Atlanta, with its swell band, is the biggest thing, in a social way, in Georgia, and as soon as the Atlanta people heard of Sherman's letter they gave Spear a piece of public sentiment which fairly knocked him out of his seat. Very naturally Spear is irritated by Sherman's method of expressing opposition to his measure and regards his conduct as an attempt unduly to influence legislation and to intimidate a Representative in Congress in the discharge of his public duties. He therefore proposes to rise to a personal explanation, and to call the General of the Army to account for threatening to use his official influence to defeat a measure pending in Congress and for attempting to intimidate members of the House. One of the rules of the War Department requires that all officers of the army in addressing communications to Congress, or to the members thereof, in reference to any subject of legislation, shall forward them through the Secretary of War. Mr. Speer claims that Gen. Sherman is subjected to reprimand for violation of this regulation. This is not the first time that Sherman has attempted to bulldoze members of Congress, and it wouldn't be at all a bad thing for the great law-makers to notify him officially that his business in Washington is to draw salary, dance the German and preside at big dinners, and that lobbying for or against measures before Congress is not one of his duties.

THE city of Nashville has decided to raise $5,000 for the purchase of one of Clark Mills' old pieces of junk known as a Jackson monument. Persons who have visited the White House grounds in Washington will recall the spectre of a cadaverous Kickapoo Indian in bronze sitting on a ferocious stallion, which is balanced on its hind feet like a spring bobby horse. This is Mills' statue of Jackson. As a work of art it is not much, but as a work of zampieriolostration (whatever that may be) it is without an equal. Mr. Mills is the only artist who was ever able to demonstrate that by making a bronze horse's tail heavier than his head he could be made to stand on his hind feet like an English hunter getting ready to take a stone fence. As a feat of balancing Mr. Mills's horse excels anything ever gotten up in the bookkeeping department of the Treasury. Mr. Mills made three of his wonderful balancing horses before he broke the moulds. The price of them, including Jackson, was $30,000. One was set up in Washington and another in Jackson Square, New Orleans. Mr. Mills has been holding and stabling the other horse for over twenty years, waiting for a customer. He now proposes to sell the whole outfit to the city of Nashville for the paltry sum of $5,000, provided he can be credited in the municipal archives with having presented the city with $25,000 worth of bronze—the difference between the poetical and the real price of his monstrosity. We have no doubt the city would consider Mills a donor to the extent of $50,000 if it would make him any happier or be at all likely to prolong his life. Our Tennessee friends are getting a bargain in Jackson at $5,000, for Andrew was an angular, vinegary person, totally lacking in pulchritude, and no artist, however clumsy, could do him much injustice. We honestly think, however, that if they would look around the old foundries and junk heaps of the country they might find a better horse for him to straddle than the dancing griffin which Mr. Mills is about to palm off on them as a work of art.

WITHOUT exception the New York Tribune can justly claim to be the representative American newspaper. Certainly in point of ability it is without an equal. Avoiding all attempts at sensationalism, it succeeds in printing all the news of the world worth printing. Its correspondence is especially well written and thorough. We can not agree with the Tribune in politics. We regard it as the most dangerous Republican organ in the land. As a newspaper conducted with rare ability and enterprise, though, we can heartily recommend it to all appreciative and intelligent readers. The Tribune has recently commenced a Sunday edition, which is proving to be one of the pronounced journalistic successes of the day.

GEN. GRANT would carry one acre of the country at least, says the Philadelphia Times. A canvass of the Presidential sentiment among the students at Yale College having been taken the other day, it was found that Grant was the favorite with 213 votes, Sherman next with 205, Blaine third with 163 and Bayard fourth with 82. The whole number of votes cast was 824, of these 561 being Republican. Tilden, though the only Yale man in the list, received only 16 votes. It won't do to infer from this that the intellectual sentiment of the country is all on the side of Grant. A canvass of the able minds of the Virginia University would probably reveal the fact that Grant is a bad tenth in the Presidential race.

THE wealthy Mr. Borie, of Philadelphia, who died the other day, leaves Grant a legacy of $10,000, simply by way of manifesting his good will and esteem. If all of Grant's rich admirers will make him an object of charity in this way and will publish their wills in advance so the country can see that the great soldier's days will not end in poverty, perhaps the sovereign electors will conclude not to give him four more years of an eleemosynary Presidency.

THERE is one beauty about the limestone paving of St. Louis which must not be overlooked. After we have had two or three weeks of dust we are glad to have a season of mud. After we have floundered about in the mud for a week or two we are delighted to go back to the dust. After all, the blessings of life are simply comparative.

WE are told that the salubrious air of the White House was not disturbed on Tuesday night last by the popping of champagne corks in honor of the reception of the Diplomatic ducks. By this temperate regard for the proprieties of life Mr. Hayes is able to fob about $10,000 more a year than he otherwise would of Mr. Tilden's hard-earned salary.

NOT a nickel has been subscribed as yet to our Irish Relief Fund. We do not remember to have even seen a politician looking at the beautiful blank. The gigantic proposition of the Merchants' Exchange has taken the wind out of the sails of all small craft.

A GENTLEMAN died in Pennsylvania the other day at the advanced age of one hundred, and his last word was "beer." It has been years since the cause of temperance received such a mortal blow.

WHEN a woman appears at a White House reception with $800,000 worth of diamonds blazing on her person it is about time to despair of the Republic. Where's Denis Kearney?

GEN. GRANT will leave Cuba for Mexico tomorrow. It is understood that an advance agent has been sent on to make arrangements for an earthquake or a revolution.

THE Washington Post is mistaken in saying that no city can expect to have more than one Democratic National Convention—Baltimore has had half a dozen.

THE New York Herald has collected $40,000 for Ireland outside of Bennett's splendid gift.

PERSONAL.

—It is stated that Miss Genevieve Ward will revisit America in the autumn for the production of "Forget Me Not" and other plays.

—The inventor of the Bloomer costume, Amelia Bloomer, is living in a quiet village of Iowa. Of course, she has found no husband.

—Gen. Robert E. Lee had a pew in the old Christ Church in Alexandria where Washington once worshipped; and every button has been taken by curiosity-hunters off the cushions in that pew.

—Mrs. Cool Burgess, of Toronto, obtained, on Friday last, under the Canadian Married Women's act, an order from the court allowing her to transfer her property without her husband's signature.

—Governor Roberts, of Texas, is more than seventy years old, yet at a recent leap year ball he danced, dressed in homespun, with seven young ladies. The next day he commuted two death sentences.

—Senator Edmunds is fifty-one years old, and from fees of his law-practice he has saved $200,000 or $300,000. He reads a great many books, and he has a large art collection. He is sociable with a chosen few.

—Mrs. John Jacob Astor attended the White House reception last Tuesday evening, and "seemed a perfect blaze of light." She wore in addition to other costly ornaments a diamond necklace valued at $50,000.

—John Rice, who was with Commodore Perry at the battle of Lake Erie, died at Shelby, Ohio, on the 9th, aged ninety years. As he requested to be buried with the honors of war, the several military organizations and bands of the place will assist at his funeral. Mr. Rice is the last pensioner on the rolls known to have been with Perry at his victory.

—Miss Howard, a popular physician at Tientsin, China, is a Canadian girl, and received her education at Michigan University. For successfully treating the wife of a prominent Chinese statesman she has been sent to Pekin in a royal barge, loaded with presents.

—Queen Victoria is the owner of a silver-gilt casket in which are lockets containing locks of hair of thirteen officers who fell at Isandula. Each locket is engraved with an "In Memoriam" and the name of the officer, together with the date of his death. The souvenir was ordered by the Queen.

—Mrs. Secretary Sherman is described as "one of those creations which can be compared to the lilies of the field in purity of style and stately grace—occupying the middle ground between blonde and brunette, her tawny hair with its natural wave gathered in the low, Greek coil, without comb or ornament of any kind.

—Ristori is to have a magnificent new house in Rome, which the Marquis, her husband, is now building for her in the Via Nazionale. The workmen, in digging almost the last spadeful of the foundations the other day, came upon a very large deposit of ancient bronzes—some beautiful Greek and Roman statuettes—which are important and valuable.

—It is only a day or two ago that Miss Moulton, a niece of General Sherman, was married to a Lieutenant Rockwell, of the army, and now comes the announcement that to-morrow, at Lancaster, O., Miss Mamie Reese, another niece of the General, is to marry Lieutenant Backus, of the navy. The army and navy seem to have been too sweet to be resisted by the pretty nieces of old Tecumseh.

The Race is Over.

[From the New York World.]

Grant wins in a saunter, and the best thing the other Republican aspirants can do is to recognize and bow to the inevitable and try to save what they can from the wreck. Mr. Blaine, who does not wish to be a dead-head in the enterprise, has applied for the Vice-Presidency. Let Washburne pre-empt the Secretaryship of State, settle go for the Postmaster-Generalship, Garfield take the Treasury, and so on. Mr. Sherman, we fear, must go West again!

Chastened by Fire.

[From the Kansas City Times.]

Moody and Sankey labored in vain with the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH, and at last an outraged Deity visited the Sodom-and-Gomorrah of journalistic naughtiness and forwardness with fire and brimstone. And the s.-and-g. of j. n. has been much more discreet ever since.

The Same Thought.

[From the Springfield Republican.]

It was about this time four years ago that Blaine said to a Tribune reporter that he feared but one opponent. "Who is that?" said the reporter. "The dark horse," replied Blaine. Probably Mr. Blaine is saying the same thing now.

The Man With a Jaw.

[From the New York Tribune.]

An admiring correspondent closes a moving description of Blackburne, the wiper, by saying he has a very large jaw. The public had already pictured him in its mind's eye as thus accoutred. No ordinary jaw could create so great a racket.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial.]

The measure of Grant's honors is full, pressed down, running over, and bursting through the cracks. The next term, even if possible, would therefore be a reckless waste if given to Grant.

Dangerous People.

[From the Atlanta Constitution.]

The Voorhees Exodus Committee is not altogether in vain. It shows how these things are worked up. Railroad men and real estate agents are the most dangerous politicians we have.

On Deck Again.

[From the Washington Post.]

We are glad to observe that the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH has so far recovered from the effect of the late fire as to appear in an eight-page form again. Mr. Pulitzer seems to be the veritable "fayn[illegible]."

The Same Old Gang.

[From the Kansas City Times.]

The Globe-Democrat ought to publish the names of the organizers of the Grant Club in St. Louis. A suspicious world is anxious to ascertain if it's the same old gang.

Resembles Bony.

[From the New York Sun.]

The truth is Grant resembles Bonaparte much more nearly than he resembles Washington. Constitutional ideas form no part of his plan.

PUBLIC OPINION.

A Growl at Mr. Moody.

ST. LOUIS, February 12, 1880.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am a serious young man, under conviction, as the phrase goes, and I have been attending meetings conducted by Messrs. Moody and Sankey and as a consequence I am becoming less serious and appretably less convicted day by day, and this through the undue familiarity with which the great evangelist treats his creator. I have listened silently, but protestingly, to prayers that were actually calculated to shock the most Christian ears in the room, and I must say, Mr. Editor, that I think much of the lukewarmness with which this town is reproached comes directly from the remarkable prayers offered by the reverend gentleman who is conducting the revival. A MOURNER.

A Man who Can't See a Joke.

ST. LOUIS, February 12, 1880.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In looking over the personals in your yesterday afternoon paper, I find the following: "Mr. P. D. Cordell, the local temperance agitator, took a 'Drink' last night at Pope's Theater." The point is well taken, and it is a good one on me; but for fear that many of my friends who know that I have not gone to places of amusement during the past five years will think it strange that I was at Pope's Theater Tuesday night, and that I really did take a drink of intoxicants, I will explain. Having read and heard much of that great temperance play called "Drink," and always anxious to post myself in everything pertaining to temperance, I went to see the play of "Drink." I am now glad to say that I was much pleased, highly entertained and greatly benefited. I would advise every man and woman, boy and girl and child to go and see this play of "Drink." I believe it to be one of the grandest temperance lectures ever produced, and undoubtedly will do great good in St. Louis and aid us in bringing about thousands of reformations. By all means let all drinking men go and see it.

P. D. CORDELL.

Smoking on Street Cars.

ST. LOUIS, February 12, 1880.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The cigar-smoking community appear deeply grieved that the Olive street car line have prohibited smoking upon their cars, and insist that at least it should be permitted when no ladies are present. Might it not be possible that there are gentlemen to whom the smoke of mean tobacco is really objectionable? or do smokers possess all the rights of travel? Suppose that a lady should enter the car at some point, is she to be stifled and poisoned by the foul air of a car filled with the smoke of poor tobacco? Again, they plead for the privilege upon the platform of the cars. My own experience is that when it was allowed they always used the front for the purpose, so that all the occupants should have the benefit of the villianous smell as it came through the open doorway. My opinion is that no person should, for his own gratification, in a public place, insist upon inflicting a nuisance upon the public, and no gentleman would; but, if a vicious habit had so fixed itself upon him as to be irresistible (!), he should do his smoking in his own house. There is one thing which strikes strangers here and gives them an unfavorable opinion of the manners of our city, and this is that they see gentlemen indulging in this pernicious habit while walking or driving with ladies on the public streets. In no respectable city outside St. Louis will it ever be seen. I hope the proprietors of the Olive street line will be firm and that their example will be followed by every other line in the city. DECENCY.

MEXICAN TRADE.

What Two Residents of Mexico Have to Say About It.

Manuel Gameros and Pedro Cueto, two residents of the City of Mexico, are at the Lindell Hotel. The former is a mining engineer, while the latter is a counselor at law. They arrived in St. Louis yesterday en route for New York and are making the trip through the United States entirely for pleasure. A reporter for the POST-DISPATCH visited the Mexican gentlemen, at their apartments, this morning, and found them agreeable and communicative. After a brief preface the reporter asked them what talk there was in their native land concerning a railroad from St. Louis to Mexico.

"There is a great deal of talk about it in Nexico. The people all seem to be anxious to secure such railroad connections with this city. In the city of Mexico, especially, the talk is general for such a road," replied Cueto.

"I don't know what will be done about the road," put in Gameros, "but this I do know, that at the present time St. Louis sells more things in Mexico—has a larger trade there than any other one city in the United States."

"What articles are most generally sent from here?" asked the reporter.

"Beer," answered both of the natives of Mexico in the same breath. They followed up their statement by saying that the amber-colored liquid retailed in Mexico for fifty cents a bottle, and that it was very generally used by the natives of Mexico.

Referring again to the railroad scheme, Gameros, the mining engineer, said: "I think the plan of extending the railroad from San Antonio, Tex., to the capital of Mexico would be the cheapest and most practical way of uniting St. Louis with Mexico. It would cost less than any other line, as the route from San Antonio to Eagle Pass, Cuarto Cienegas, and from the latter point to Mexico City would encounter no mountain ranges, and could be built for less money than any other route that I have heard mentioned."

They concluded the talk by expressing their desire that the two cities would be united by rail at a very early date.

A SINGULAR CASE.

A Man Gives Himself Up and Says He Has Robbed His Employers.

Yesterday afternoon a fellow by the name of Thomas Stack went up to the Third District Police Station and gave himself up saying he had stolen goods from his employers, and that he wanted to go to the penitentiary. He was locked up according to his own desire. He was evidently laboring under the influence of liquor. He said he was employed by Meyer, Bannerman & Co. the wholesale saddlery men, and an officer was sent down to bring one of the firm up to see Stack. Mr. Jacob Meyer went up to the station and had an interview with Stack. He returned to see what the loss was. It turned out to be trifling, not exceeding $30. Stack had been employed but a short time and had taken a few articles out and sold them to various parties. Mr. Meyer told him yesterday that he would like to have the names of the parties he had sold the goods to, and this morning Stack sent them down to him. For prudential reasons they are not given to the public. Stack was evidently verging close on the jim-jams yesterday when he surrendered himself, and after sobering up is not disposed to talk so much. His employers are disposed not to deal harshly with him, and may not prosecute.

Amusement Notes.

"Drink" continues to draw crowded houses at Pope's, and has made a genuine hit.

Gus Williams as "Our German Senator" is exceedingly laughable, and is doing good business at the Olympic.

The sale of seats commenced this morning for the second week of "Drink" at Pope's; for "Nip and Tuck" at the Grand Opera-house, and Chanfrau at the Olympic.

Good houses and an excellent bill is the rule at the Theatre Comique this week. McAndrews, Norton, Hearne, Shay, Chrisdie and Zeltner, and Misses Morningstar and Shandley are entertaining in a high degree.

For the first time in America, Vierling's celebrated "Rape of the Sabines" will be given at the Mercantile Library Hall this evening by the Liederkranz. The orchestra will consist of forty pieces and the chorus of one hundred and ten voices. Prof. Egmont Froehlich is musical director. A rare musical treat is anticipated.

The most popular of all opera bouffes, Offenbach's "Grande Duchesse," was presented last evening at the Grand Opera-house to a large and fashionable audience. The honors of the evening decidedly belonged to Capoul, whose lively interpretation of Fritz and whose splendid singing with his delicate shading and execution secured for him almost enthusiastic reception. To-night Offenbach's "La Perichole, The Street Singer," will be given with Paola-Marie as La Perichole and Capoul as Piquillo.

A WELL-KNOWN German minister, Rev. A. Opitz, of Schleisingerville, Wis., writes: I was a sufferer with Rheumatism for years. Friends recommended the use of St. Jacobs Oil; I tried it, and must confess that the result was astonishing. Having hardly used up the first bottle, I found relief, and the second one cured me. I therefore feel under obligations, and shall recommend this effective remedy whenever I have a chance.

THE COURTS.

A Verdict in the Fox-Union Depot Case this Morning.

Assignee's Report—A Case to Recover Attorney Fees—Other Legal Briefs.

Legal Services.

The case of J. M. Krum vs. Edward Butler, an action on account, was taken up before Judge Adams this morning. The suit presents some peculiar features, as it involves the payment of attorneys' fees for legal services rendered the defendant and others at defendant's request before the Court of Criminal Correction. A jury was called, and the case commenced during the morning. The plaintiff's petition alleges that on the 1st of February, 1878, the defendant was justly indebted to C. C. Simmons, an attorney at law, in the sum of $488. This debt was incurred by the defendant on account of said Simmons rendering legal services in defending the defendant and various other persons at defendant's instance and request, at the Court of Criminal Correction. The defendant and his friends, avers the plaintiff, were charged with misdemeaners in office, conspiracy and bribing a witness. These services were rendered in the year 1877, and in the month of January, 1878. The petition further states that January 18, 1877, Simmons assigned and transferred his right, title and interest in the claim against the defendant to the plaintiff, who thereby became the legal owner thereof. He consequently prays for judgment for the amount of the claim.

The bill which is made a part of the petition includes services in defending, at Butler's request, E. T. Lynch, Richard Power, C. S. Reily, John Connors, Pat Landen and H. B. Dicks, for misdemeanor; Edward Butler, John Connors and John Conners, charged with conspiracy; Edward Butler and his nephew, charged with the bribery of a witness, and two cases for W. A. Roper, charged with misdemeanor, the whole amounting to $600, of which $111 had been paid.

Assignee's Account.

John H. Fisse, assignee of the People's Savings Institution, submitted his report this morning in Circuit Court No. 1. The assets are as follows: Balance on hand at last annual statement, $29,623 70; amount received on notes and other accounts, $7,559 87, making the total assets $37,183 57. The total amount of disbursements was $5,814 99, leaving a balance on hand of $31,368 57, which balance consists of $13,222 66 in cash; $1,280 in bonds and stock; $550 in real estate notes, and the remainder in property. The was report received and filed.

Against the Union Depot.

The jury in the case of James Fox versus the Union Depot Company brought in a sealed verdict last night. The suit was for $3,000 damages sustained by the plaintiff, who owns property a short distance from Twelfth street, by the obstruction on that street by the defendant's tearing it up and placing thereon a railroad track, cars, locomotives, etc. The case was concluded yesterday morning before Judge Adams, but a verdict was not obtained until late last evening. This morning the verdict was read. It was in favor of the plaintiff for $225.

Slander Suit.

Michael Murphy and Ellen Murphy, his wife, instituted legal proceedings against Chas. Feldman this afternoon, for slander. They assess the damages they have sustained at the exalted sum of $10,000. In the petition they allege that the defendant, on the 19th day of last January, openly accused Ella Murphy of not being a pure and virtuous woman, in fact he charged her with being anything but a lady. The petition avers that this accusation was heard by divers persons, and that it has resulted to their damage.

A Notary's Pay.

An appeal case of account came up before Judge Thayer, this morning. The case of C. V. Betts versus Robert Riley and Joseph Wolfort was tried before a justice of the peace, when a judgment was given for the plaintiff for $126, for services rendered in taking depositions. The original demand was for $141 70. An appeal was taken to the Circuit Court, and the case was submitted this morning.

Probate.

In the estate of Gilbert I. Shaw, letters testamentary were issued this afternoon. Geo. H. Morgan was appointed administrator, with bond at $20,000. The estate is valued at $10,000.

Legal Notes.

Divisions No. 2 and 3 of the Circuit Court were not in session to-day.

The Court of Appeals, after a short session this morning, adjourned until next Tuesday morning.

W. H. Heitbecker commenced suit this afternoon against H. H. Niewoehner, to recover a small amount due on account.

Notice is given that the transcripts of cases appealed to the St. Louis Court of Appeals must be filed during the present week.

The Court of Appeals met this morning. Law docket in Circuit Court No. 1 will be called to-morrow morning, as also in Nos. 2 and 5.

Melinda Keyo applied for a divorce this afternoon from J. B. Keyo. Drunkenness and idleness are assigned as the reasons for seeking a separation.

The Federal, Circuit and District Courts have adjourned until the first day of next March. Judge Treat was called away by a sudden death in his family, and consequently adjourned the courts for this district.

In the case of S. B. Pilkington vs. the St. Louis Warehouse Company, the judgment was set aside by Judge Thayer this morning for error. Default and final judgment was entered against the defendants for $2,885.

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS UNDER WATER.

Recovery of an Iron Safe From the Wreck of the Effie Alton.

A telegram from Davenport, Iowa, this morning, gives the information that some fishermen yesterday discovered in the river, near that place, an iron safe that was lost in the wreck of the steamer Effie Alton, which ran against the bridge there in 1856. The safe was not opened, two citizens having forbidden it until word could be had from this city. It has been twenty-four years since the boat was wrecked and the event had long ago been forgotten. It is not known exactly who it is in St. Louis the telegram refers to as being interested in the discovered safe. Old river men here say that the wreck of the Effie Alton was the cause of a long and vexatious law-suit, the owners of the boat bringing an action for damages against the owners of the bridge. The Davenport bridge was looked on with much disfavor by steamboat men at that time and there was a very general interest taken in the suit brought by the owners of the Effie Alton. It is said that a considerable sum was raised from St. Louis merchants to pay the expenses of the prosecution of this and kindred suits. The safe found at Davenport yesterday undoubtedly contains money, and probably other valuables. The exact nature of its contents cannot be ascertained. The proprietors of the boat are said to live in Cincinnati, and it is supposed they have been duly notified.

OTHER FACTS ABOUT THE BOAT.

Capt. Mason, the City Marshal, recollects the boat well, which was one of the finest steamers on the upper river. In the spring of 1856 the Effie Alton, commanded by Capt. Hurd, was passing up through the old Davenport bridge, which was then located on the rapids, the piers being rather turned against the current. The river was up and the Effie was thrown violently against one of the piers, the stoves being overturned and the boat set on fire at once. No life was lost, but boat and cargo went up forever. The loss was over two hundred thousand dollars. Capt. Mason said that the bridge in the old position was a regular dead-fall. The magnificent Gray Eagle was lost there and a great many other boats and barges were cast away on the same pier. Captain Mason came very near losing the Vixen at the same place.

No one here has any idea on what may be in the safe, but the supposition is that everything of value was taken from it before the boat went down.

MYSTERIOUS SELF-MURDER.

Carl Kueberich Poisons Himself Because He Hated a Man.

Carl Kueberich, a German tanner, aged almost forty-four, died this morning at 2612 Columbus street from the effects of a dose of Paris green administered by his own hand. The deceased was a hard-working, industrious man who was supporting a family on $10 a week, and the united testimony of his neighbors bears out his excellent character. His body is lying in a bed in the back room of his house, covered with a sheet, and his face bears yet very evident traces of the suffering he has undergone in the last two days. An inquest on his remains was begun at two o'clock this afternoon by Dr. Auler and Mr. Frank O'Neil, and his wife, Pauline Kueberich, was examined. She testified that her husband came home on Monday last about noon, and hung up his hat and coat, and as it was very unusual for him to come home while he should be at work, she questioned him closely, but he parried all her questions, telling her that nothing was the matter with him, and taking a vessel he went out and came back soon with some beer. He then called his two little girls to him, kissed them and gave them some of the beer, took the glass himself and put some green powder in it, filled it with beer and drank off the potion. He then called his wife, told her he had taken poison and bade her good-bye, undressing himself at the same time and getting into the bed. The closest questioning could develop no reason for the tragedy further than that he hated a man whom he would not tell, but it is supposed some one at the tannery. Medical aid was summoned at once, and the spasms began to come on him about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. From that time on Monday until 2:30 this morning he has tossed from side to side of his bed, tortured by convulsion after convulsion, which racked him terribly. The only remark he made was between two of the paroxysms, when he groaned: "This is too much pain. I had done better to go into the river; then I would be now dead." His wife is utterly unable to account for the reason of this suicide. She says that when he would read of a suicide in the papers he would always manifest much contempt for the wretches who took their own lives.

The Coroner is sitting without a jury, and the inquest will be concluded this afternoon.

THE meeting this evening at Judge Russel's office at the Three-Mile House, in Butchertown, promises to be largely attended. It is held in aid of the Irish Relief Fund, and will be addressed by Col. A. W. Slayback, J. McGindley, ex-Senator Thompson and W. H. Hanley.

Breadstuffs and Provisions.

MORNING BOARD—FUTURES.

Wheat—A decidedly weaker feeling was manifest to-day, telegraphic advices being discouraging and bearish operators, seeing their opportunity aiding greatly toward a decline, with all the efforts in their power. The consequence was a considerable loss in value, with the tendency downward most of the time too. Cash No. 2 red sold at $1 26¾; March at $1 28⅜@1 28, closing at $1 28¼; April at $1 31⅛@1 30⅞, closing at $1 30½; May at $1 32⅝@1 32.

Corn—Sharing in the depression that prevailed in wheat, this market became weak and declined, with moderate trading, operators manifesting little desire to take hold freely. Cash No. 2 mixed sold at 33⅝c; March at 34⅞c; April at 36⅛@36 3-16c; May at 37⅝@37⅜c; June at 37⅜c.

We quote s. c. hams plain and canvassed at 8⅞@10⅛c.

CATTLE—The movement in the cattle market this forenoon was slow, but taken all in all there were fair sales made in the aggregate. Reports from New York and other points not very flattering, yet in the face of this shippers made fair purchases this morning. Receipts light, about seventy-five car loads, the bulk of medium to fair native steers, the balance mixed butchers stuff. Eastern and interior shippers were the leading operators, they paying from $4@5 15 per 100 lbs in extremes for light to good native steers. There were no prime or choice native steers offered. These were in demand and scarce. Stock and feeding steers likewise in demand and scarce. Mixed buchers' stuff slow and lower to sell. Milch cows with calves in demand. Ruling quotations somewhat irregular except on choice grades.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE FOR PARTITION.—Notice is hereby given that the Circuit Court within and for the city of St. Louis on the 30th day of January, 1880, in a certain cause pending in said court, wherein Charles A. Faris, M. Clemence Faris, John F. Carton, Helen A. Carton, Eugene H. Benoist, Louis A. Benoist, Theodore Benoist, Leo De Smet Benoist and Howard A. Benoist were ex parte petitioners for partition, rendered judgment that partition among the petitioners be made of a certain tract or parcel of land owned by the petitioners in fee simple, situated in the north half of block No. 42 of DeWard's survey of the city commons, and being now in said city of St. Louis, and more particularly described as follows, to-wit: commencing at a point where the southern line of Rappahannock street intersects the western line of the Little Prairie and running thence southwardly along the western line of said Little Prairie, 145 feet, more or less, to the intersection with the western line of Michigan avenue, thence southwardly along the western line of Michigan avenue 354 feet 6 inches to the southern line of the Durand tract, thence westwardly along the southern line of the Durand tract, 127 feet 3 inches to the western line of the Little Prairie, thence southwardly along said last mentioned line 18 feet 3 inches to a stone set for the northeast corner of the land owned by Charless and La Bourgeois, thence westwardly and parallel to Rappahannock street 515 feet 9 inches to a stone corner, thence northwardly along the eastern line of land formerly owned by Wm. N. Switzer and nearly parallel to the western line of the Little Prairie, 551 feet 7 inches to Rappahannock street, thence eastwardly along the southern line of Rappahannock street 519 feet 5 inches to the place of beginning. And the said court, finding that said parcel of land was not susceptible of partition in kind among the petitioners without great prejudice to the owners, then and there ordered and adjudged that the same be sold according to law, and appointed the undersigned a special commissioner for that purpose. Now, therefore, the undersigned, in obedience to said order of sale, and by authority of law, will, as such commissioner, expose said parcel of land and premises to sale at public auction to the highest bidder for cash at the east front door of the Court-house in said city of St. Louis, on Mutual Insurance Company.

The advantages of the mutual benefit societies are amply illustrated by the following facts: On the 6th of January Mr. Wm. Haverpoorth, a member of Olive Branch Lodge No. 812 of the Knights of Honor, died. It was the first death that had occurred in this lodge, and the secretary was not quite posted as to the prescribed form of notifying the supreme lodge of the event, and hence a week's unnecessary delay ensued. On the 5th of February, however, the widow of the deceased member received a check from the hands of the trustees for $2,000, the amount of the insurance. Ordinarily it only takes but twenty days before the payment is made. This is prompt action and speaks for itself.

LEGAL EVILS.

A Plan to Abolish the Court of Appeals,

And to Establish a Supreme Court of Nine Judges and Three Divisions.

Great dissatisfaction exists among the members of the bar in St. Louis in reference to the delay in procuring justice, and the Court of Appeals, especially, is regarded by the majority of the legal fraternity as a stumbling-block rather than an advancement to that phrase of the old English magna charter, that justice "should not be delayed." According to the present working of the legal machinery, it will take a litigant five years before he can expect a decision from the State court of final resort. At present in St. Louis there are five Circuit Courts, each with a Judge, then there is the Court of Appeals, composed of three Judges. A sort of intermediary court is the general term of the Circuit Court, when the five Judges meet on bench and decide upon some legal point certified upon by one of the members. The general term also takes cognizance of the bonds of the court officials, such as Sheriff, Clerk, etc., and also acts as a kind of ex-officio commission over the Jury Commissioner. The meetings of the general term are rather rare now since the establishment of the Court of Appeals in 1876. This appellate tribunal was created for the express purpose of expediting business, but it has had the contrary effect. It has final jurisdiction in cases not involving more than $25,000. All other suits can go to the Supreme Court of the State, and they invariably do. No matter how this court may decide, ninety-nine litigants out of a hundred will take their case to the highest tribunal. Now, the procedure in the Appellete Court is almost the same as in the Supreme Court. Briefs must be filed, arguments heard and the tedious and vexatious formalis of the law gone through with as if it were a tribunal of final resort, when its decision never satisfies both litigants, one of whom invariably appeals to the higher judges. Thus a delay is created and the channel of justice is really blocked, as the Court of Appeals only occasions delay and costs before the final arbitration.

The dissatisfaction of the members of the bar has become so great at the unsatisfactory working of the judicial wheels that much discussion has been had of late on the subject. Many plans have been proposed, and the matter will shortly come before the Bar Association, which is expected to take action towards remedying the evils of which they complain. The most feasible method, and one which it is highly probable the Bar Association will adopt, is one modeled somewhat after the Ohio plan. At present the State Supreme Court consists of a judiciary of five members. It is proposed to increase this number to nine and to divide the Court into three sections, each comprising three Judges. The Court of Appeals will then be abolished, and suits will be advanced from the Circuit Court direct to the Supreme Court. The three contemplated divisions of the Supreme Court are to consist of one tribunal to pass upon criminal appeals; a second to pass upon equity and land cases, and the third for civil and other suits. Thus the work of the Supreme Court will be greatly facilitated, as there will really be three courts instead of one, and it is believed that the highest tribunal could then keep up with its docket. It is further proposed that in all cases involving constitutional questions and grave points of law the nine Judges shall sit as one court. It is claimed for this scheme that it has worked well in Ohio and that it secures the most rapid and satisfactory relief to litigants. It is evident the lawyers believe some relief is necessary, and as they are directly interested, they will certainly devise some feasible plan free from the objections urged against the present system. The matter will be fully discussed by the Bar Association, and some scheme fully determined on, when the necessary steps to secure the needed legislation will be taken. The above plan is one which has many features to recommend it.

VISITING OFFICIALS.

The Gentlemen From Cincinnati Spend Another Day Looking About St. Louis.

The Cincinnati officials, consisting of Messrs. W. S. Capelle, County Auditor; Dr. A. L. Carrick, Coroner; J. M. Reardon, B. F. Hopkins, and John Zumstein, County Commissioners; Chas. S. Fisher, Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners, Lafayette Martin and H. Brockmann, of the City School Board, are still in the city, and spent to-day in making further inquiries and investigations among the public institutions of St. Louis. Mr. C. W. Baker, of the same party, had to return to Cincinnati last night in answer to a telegram calling him to attend to some official business.

The gentlemen are all of a sociable disposition, and have enjoyed themselves very much since they have been in the city. All of them have been in St. Louis before, but some of them have not been here for many years, and they express themselves as astonished at the many changes that have taken place. They visited some of the theaters last evening, and were well entertained, but they say that St. Louis cannot compete with Cincinnati in the way of amusements.

Mr. Reardon, President of the Cincinnati Board of Commissioners, is much interested in the public institutions of this city, and says that he finds this city is much like his own in many respects, but that Chicago is altogether different in almost everything.

VISITING AROUND.

At 10 o'clock this morning the party started out on their tour for the day. They first paid a visit to the headquarters of the Fire Department, on Seventh, between Pine and Olive. Chief Sexton was there and received his visitors with his usual cordiality. He was glad to give any information about the St. Louis Fire Department in his power. After showing some improvements in the way of getting up steam quickly, he had the gong sounded and the horses called out. The visitors were much pleased with this exhibition, saying that they had not been to a city where horses were so well trained. Chief Sexton then ordered out the Pompier Corps and had them give a practical exhibition of their expert climbing of one of the neighboring buildings. All passed off most successfully, and the gentlemen expressed themselves without reserve in praise of the discipline and efficiency of the firemen, and will evidently return home with a most favorable impression of the St. Louis Fire Department.

AT THE MORGUE.

They next paid a visit to the Morgue, as Dr. Carrick wanted to get a few more points about the construction of that building. They then went on 'Change, arriving there about 12 o'clock, and were cordially received by President Smith and other prominent members. Mr. Reardon said the Exchange hall was undoubtedly the finest in the United States, excepting probably Music Hall of Cincinnati.

AT OTHER PLACES.

After the visit on 'Change the gentlemen took dinner and in the afternoon paid a visit to the Insane Asylum, the Poor-house, the Female Hospital and House of Refuge.

They will get through with their explorations this evening, and to-morrow morning will return to Cincinnati.

Prosecuted by His Mother.

Lawrence Dempsey was arraigned this morning before Judge Dennison, charged with disturbing the peace. Lawrence was prosecuted by his mother, and in a vigorous manner. Lawrence Dempsey is twenty-five and has a very frail constitution. So sure as he gets drunk he is certain to get sick. The mother nurses and pays doctor bills for him when he is ill, and in return for her kindness as soon as well Lawrence gets drunk, comes home, breaks the furniture, abuses his mother and then is taken sick. The mother says she wants no more to do with him. Judge Dennison imposed a fine on Dempsey that will cause him to be sent to the Work-house

BOLD BURGLARS.

A Lad's Fierce Struggle With One of Them in an Easton Avenue Residence.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock last night the residence of Timothy Murphy, 3204 Easton avenue, was burglarized by two men, who pried the front door open with burglar tools and gained an entrance to the bed-room, where they ransacked everything and broke open a wardrobe. While engaged in plundering the place Mr. Murphy's son, a lad of nineteen, came into the room, when he was caught by the neck by one of the burglars who endeavored to choke him. Young Murphy grappled with his antagonist and a fierce struggle ensued. During the encounter the other robber made good his escape. Officer Daly arrived just in time to secure his man, who was in the very act of escaping, having relieved himself from the grasp of Murphy. The prisoner proved to be the notorious Jim McNamara, an old time thief and burglar. Jim has served a term in the Indiana Penitentiary. He is known to all the old policemen on the force. The burglars succeeded in getting $20 in money at Murphy's. The one that escaped must have been the person who has the amount, as when searched it was not found on McNamara. A warrant was sworn out this morning charging McNamara with burglary. Young Murphy could give no description of the escaped burglar more than that he was taller than McNamara.

It is the opinion of all the police officers that McNamara and his pal are the parties who knocked down Lawrence Hanraty and attempted to rob him, night before last, on Twentieth and O'Fallon streets.

THE COMMITTEE OF FIVE.

A List of Delegates to Washington to be Completed To-Day.

A session of the committee of five appointed at the meeting held on Tuesday evening to take steps to secure the presence of the National Democratic Convention was held yesterday afternoon at the Lindell. Mr. John G. Priest was in the chair and Messrs. Armstrong, Slayback, Gibson, Rowland and Bent were all present. A pledge was received from the various hotel proprietors promising that no advance should be made on the usual rates, after which the committee went into executive session. Another meeting of the committee will be held at half past four this afternoon to receive the reports of the sub-committees on transportation, Pullman Car Company, etc. It is understood that the list of fifteen delegates to proceed to Washington City is nearly perfected, but it will not be made public until to-morrow, as the committee is desirous of procuring a personal assurance from the gentlemen chosen that they will consent to serve. At the meeting this afternoon the reports of the sub-committees on transportation will be received and the names of the fifteen finally determined on. The National Democratic Convention meets at Willard's Hotel, Washington, on the 23d inst., while the executive committee meets a few days earlier.

East St. Louis.

Fred. Schubert, Roman Bogardus and Frank Scanlin occupy cells at the station-house on a charge of trespassing. They attempted to get across the bridge on the railroad cars without paying and were caught in the act. 'Squire Graney will hear the cases to-day.

The council met yesterday. All the members except Mr. Prottsman were present. City Clerg Shannon's license report shows that the sums paid into the City Treasury during the month of January for licenses footed up $1,129 05. A motion to enlarge the City Court-room was passed. Nothing more than the allowing of claims and routine business was transacted.

Mayor Joyce is in receipt of a communication from a Mr. Ruark, of Carlinville, which will place two of the Deputy Marshals in a rather unpleasant position if the statements and suspicions are found to be based on facts. Some time ago Mr. Ruark was robbed of about $150 worth of cutlery and the thieves were arrested in East St. Louis. Mr. Ruark says that though he paied the police all they demanded, very probably the expenses, he has not recovered more than $70 worth of the property, though the men who confessed of having committed the robbery when questioned seperately told him that the officers had received it all. They say the deputies confiscated for their own use an amount of the property. The matter is in the hands of the Police Committee of the Council and will be thouroughly sifted.

ABOUT TOWN.

LOUIS P. EBER was incorrectly named as swearing out a warrant against a Mr. McIntosh yesterday. Mr. Eber is only a witness in the case.

ANOTHER prophetic communication has been received from the O'Fallon, Ill., prophet, Elijah. It has been placed on file to warn the younger members of the force.

QUITE an amount of damage was done by the wind storm in the north end of town yesterday. A number of reports about fallen or dangerous signs and chimneys are being received by the police.

IDA MAY and Emma Dail, alias Moss, two of the worst characters on Christy avenue, were before Judge Dennison this morning and fined $15 and costs. They will go to the Work-house on a short visit.

THE Union Market has been very much improved. The changes in the stalls make more room and give a much larger revenue to the city. Besides this, it widens Christy avenue ten feet from Fifth to Sixth streets.

A MULE created considerable excitement on the streets this morning by throwing its rider at Fifth and Chestnut, and scampering down to Third and Pine, where, after a heroic effort, it was secured by a number of policemen and citizens.

THERE was a meeting of the boss horseshoers at Weagler's Hall last evening, at which Mr. Edward Butler presided. It was resolved to organize a Boss Horseshoers' Benevolent and Protective Association, and by-laws for the same were adopted. Mr. Myers reported that the following horseshoers would become members of the association: Messrs. Sheridan, Cook, J. Busby, Purdy, Ross, Sullivan, Larguey, Odell, Walkinhorse, Fitzgerald & Co, Booth, Schmidt & Mohrman, Schneir, Finnegan, Cahill, McCarty, Lynch, Malone, Johnson, Hettenbacher, Tilkemeyer, Kespohl and J. Donovan. Meetings will hereafter be held on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month.

Second District Police Court.

There were docketed in this court to-day twelve cases: Blaky Higgins, Lillie Higgins, Ellen Kinney, Robert Higgins, Lawrence Dempsey, Maggie Powers and George Green were assessed from $5 to $10 for disturbing the peace. Julia Sheehan, whose name figures the most prominent of any one on the docket, paid her tri-weekly visit this morning, and as usual paid $3 for being drunk on the streets.

The First District Police Court.

Detective Tom Hennessy came into the First District Police Court this morning with a curious case against John Wilson, who, he alleges, had a worthless check in his possession at the Union Depot, which he was trying to dispose of to a couple of gentlemen from the rural districts. Hennessy collared him, and the case was continued until to-morrow for the city. Beyond this case there was very little of any interest in Judge Jecko's Court. Some fines of $10 each were imposed on a bevy of half a dozen laughing damozels, who showed up badly in the gray morning light with draggled plumes and rather dirty dresses. Randolph Gibson, who looked remarkably like a Zulu chieftain, was brought up for an attack on a Mr. Hunter, in which some very forcible African language was used. One of the passages of arms which was most figurative was testified to as follows: "You black African thief, you dassn't come outside and tell me that." "I'll come out and stand on your toes and tell you so."

A Lot of Car Tickets.

John Mueller was brought up before Judge Cady this morning on a charge of petit larceny preferred by Charles Pohlman, who accuses the prisoner of having stolen $13 and twenty car tickets from him. Mueller pleaded not guilty, was tried and found guilty and sentenced to nine months in the Work-house.
